About Rosalind Henderson

Growing up as a child, her father’s alcoholism and rage handicapped Rosalind. Depression and anger, combined with the environmental pressures of living in South Central, produced a low self-image. “Neither teachers, adults, nor coaches expected much from me,” she says. However, Rosalind’s dreams motivated her to search for models of success. She learned her greatest opposition to success resided in her. Devising strategies to transform counterproductive habits, she graduated from Loyola Marymount University, earned a Multiple Subject Teaching Credential from Chapman University, and has been recognized in Who’s Who of America’s Teachers for five consecutive years. This distinguished award is bestowed to 5% of teachers nationwide. Rosalind combines countless professional lessons, research and personal experiences to present talks that will change the lives of students.

Rosalind has devoted her life to helping others use key principles that will open the doors of success. Her wisdom and humor encourages others to rise above their self-limited thinking and self-sabotaging habits to reach their full potential. The results — more productivity, income potential, and healthier relationships. Her signature slogan, “Your dream is bigger than any obstacle you face!” is her personal motto. Rosalind is also an advanced speaker from Toastmasters International. Her charismatic down-to-earth style has quickly captured the attention of audiences nationwide. Her sincere desire is to help others live authentically, and to empower them with proven strategies that add zeal and meaning to their lives.
